Training Tips from Trainers

Practice training everywhere and anywhere.

You don't have to schedule a separate training time into your day. Make the most of training opportunities when they present themselves anytime and anywhere. For example, does your dog love to go for walks? If so, call your dog to come when they are running to you to get their leash put on. Does your pup love to eat? Call them to eat then have them sit or lie down before they eat. Teach them that listening to you any time and any where is important and fun!

Be sure dogs get enough exercise.

Walking your dog is good but sometimes not enough, especially for young dogs. Play games that give dogs an opportunity to run. Their systems are designed for regular vigorous exercise.

Reinforce your dog's behavior immediately.

Dogs think in short time frames. You have milliseconds to respond to a good or bad behavior. One of the most common mistakes occurs when a person calls a dog. The dog delays a few minutes, so the person yells at the dog for not coming right away. But the dog thinks it's getting yelled at for coming -- its most recent action.
